Kennedy Gives Nod To Obama

Key Democratic leader set to endorse Ill. sen. Monday

MACON, GA. | Democratic Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts will endorse Senate colleague Barack Obama for president, party officials confirmed Sunday.

The endorsement will be announced Monday in Washington, said the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity. An official close to the senator said the announcement will be made during an Obama campaign rally at American University, where he will be joined by Kennedy and his niece, Caroline Kennedy, who has already endorsed Obama.

Kennedy

In a television interview Sunday, Obama — coming off a landslide win in South Carolina Saturday — would not answer questions about an endorsement from Kennedy. "I'll let Ted Kennedy speak for himself. And nobody does it better," he said on ABC's "This Week." "But, obviously, any of the Democratic candidates would love to have Ted Kennedy's support. And we have certainly actively sought it."

Kennedy's endorsement was highly sought by all the Democratic candidates. Besides his status as a liberal icon and member of the Kennedy dynasty, Kennedy boasts a broad national fundraising and political network.

EMERGENCIES

'Dude, We Forgot a Gift for the Magi!'

Two men on a motorcycle grabbed a woman walking into a church in Aracaju, Brazil, pulled out a machete and cut off the waist-length hair she had been growing for two decades, police said Thursday. "It must have been nearly a meter and half long," said officer Antonio da Silva. The men cut the woman's hair above her shoulders, he said, apparently with the idea of selling it to be fashioned into a wig; the tresses are worth about $550. Da Silva said it was the second recent case of hair robbery in Aracaju. (AP)

'Extreme Makeover: Home Edition' Gone Mad With Power

A Russian woman returned from her vacation home to find her regular house gone, torn down mistakenly by construction workers clearing a site. "There was nothing left, not even a log,"

Lyudmila Martemyanova said. A local prosecutor said the construction company tore down the wrong building — Martemyanova's, instead of one nearby that was marked for demolition. She refused the builder's offer of money, saying it wasn't enough even to get a room on the outskirts of the city, and has sued. Court hearings began last Thursday. (AP)

A man who calls himself a Tantric master broke his own world record by standing engulfed in ice for 72 minutes. Wim Hof, 48, stood on a Manhattan street in a clear container filled with ice for an hour and 12 minutes Saturday. Hof said he survives by controlling his body temperature through tantric meditation. Tantra is an Eastern tradition of ritual and meditation said to bring followers closer to their chosen deities. (AP)

Thieves Are Idiots

A bank robbery suspect in Sandy Springs, Ga., was arrested while waiting at a bus stop to make her getaway, police said. Channel Monae Gaskin, 22, was arrested Wednesday after a police officer saw her waiting for a bus and matched her to the description of the robbery suspect. She has been charged with robbery. "That just wasn't too bright," police Lt. Steve Rose said. But what made Gaskin think she could escape on public transportation? Police say she told them she had done it before. (AP)

Mitt Romney and Sen. John McCain campaign on Sunday in Florida. The state's primary on Tuesday could be the turning point in the race for the Republican nomination.

GOP Contenders Play Up Strengths

In Fla., McCain talks security as Romney focuses on economy

ORLANDO, FLA. | Mitt Romney and John McCain are in an increasingly bitter and personal struggle to control the campaign conversation before Florida's primary on Tuesday — and the Republican presidential nomination itself may go to the one who succeeds.

Romney, the former Massachusetts governor and venture capitalist, casts himself as a business-savvy economic turnaround artist amid recession anxiety, while McCain, the Arizona senator and Vietnam veteran, portrays himself as a courageous wartime commander in chief in a dangerous world.

"He has an enormous disadvantage when it comes to the topics of changing Washington or fixing our economy," Romney said Sunday, arguing that he is far stronger than McCain on both issues.

Countered McCain: "Even if the economy is the, quote, No. 1 issue, the real issue will remain America's security" — and, unlike him, Romney is deficient in that area.

The two leaders for the Republican nomination essentially are beginning their national arguments here, ahead of a virtual national primary on Feb. 5. They are giving rank-and-file GOP voters a choice between what have historically been the party's two most important issues — the economy and national security. That's not an easy decision for many Republicans.

Their intense fight underscores the extraordinarily close Florida race and the stakes at hand. Polls show them battling for the lead in the state, which offers the winner a hefty 57 delegates to the party's nominating convention and momentum heading into the Feb. 5 contests. LIZ SIDOTI (AP)

Travel plans: With just a week to go before the Feb. 5 contests, the top Republican candidates will soon be crisscrossing the nation. | Today's Washington Post, AI

Clinton Stresses Fla. Vote

Senator calls attention to primary, though no delegates are at stake

SARASOTA, FLA. | Democrat Hillary Rodham Clinton said Sunday she was going to Florida to assure Democrats that “their voices are heard” and to underscore her commitment to seeing the state’s delegation seated at the national convention.

Though the Democratic presidential candidates largely have heeded the national party’s request that they not campaign publicly in Florida, Clinton said it’s time to pay attention to voters there who are showing heavy interest in Tuesday’s primary.

“Hundreds of thousands of people have already voted in Florida, and I want them to know I will be there to be part of what they have tried to do to make sure their voices are heard,” Clinton said before heading for Florida.

Clinton worked overtime to deflect attention from her loss in Democratic presidential hopeful Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., remarks on the weather as she arrives at the airport in Sarasota, Fla., to attend a fundraising event.

South Carolina, hoping to claim credit for a strong showing in Florida when little was actually at stake. No delegate will be allocated, and none of the candidates has made an effort in the state.

Clinton arrived in Sarasota, taking care to abide by the details of the agreement, because events in Sarasota and later in Miami were not open to the public.

After Florida moved its primary up to Tuesday in an attempt to play a bigger role in choosing the nominees, the Democratic National Committee said it would refuse to seat the state’s delegation at the convention in August. MIKE GLOVER (AP)

Bush Official: Senate Must Act On Economic Bill

WASHINGTON | President Bush’s chief negotiator on an economic aid deal said Sunday the Senate should quickly back the plan or risk drawing resentment from the public.

The president and House leaders have agreed on a proposal to provide tax rebate checks to 117 million families.

“I don’t think the Senate is going to want to derail that deal,” Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson said. “And I don’t think the American people are going to have much patience for anything that would slow down the process.”

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said he and other senators still want to have input on the proposal. (AP)

Studies: Lead May Speed Up Aging

Research suggests metal's toxic effects reappear later in life

NEW YORK | Could it be that the "natural" mental decline that afflicts many older people is related to how much lead they absorbed decades before?

That's the provocative idea emerging from some recent studies, part of a broader area of new research that suggests pollutants can cause harm that shows up only years after someone is exposed.

Research suggests long-ago lead exposure can make an aging person's brain work as if it's five years older than it really is. If that's verified by more research, it means that sharp cuts in environmental lead levels more than 20 years ago didn't stop its widespread effects.

"We're trying to offer a caution that a portion of what has been called normal aging might, in fact, be due to ubiquitous environmental exposures like lead," said

Andrew Todd calibrates the bone lead measurement system used at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York. The system measures lifetime exposure to lead.

Dr. Brian Schwartz of Johns Hopkins University.

Studying delayed effects in people is difficult because they generally must be followed for a long time. Research with lead is easier because scientists can measure the amount that has accumulated in the shin-bone over decades.

Lead in the blood, by contrast, reflects recent exposure. Virtually all Americans have lead in their

NO WAY OUT?

→ Just how lead impairs brain-power is still a mystery — and so is the question of whether anything can be done to help people who have absorbed a lot of lead over a lifetime.

→ A medical procedure called chelation can remove lead from the body, but it wouldn't help in this case, said experts.

blood, but the amounts are far lower today than in the past.

That's a major success story for environmentalists. But work by Schwartz and Dr. Howard Hu of the University of Michigan suggests that the long-term effects of the high-lead era are still being felt.

In brief, the scientists found that the higher the lifetime lead dose, the poorer the performance across a wide variety of mental functions.

Hu stressed that lead appears to be only one of several factors involved in age-related mental decline. MALCOLM RITTER (AP)

Her father and President Bush have both vowed to remain neutral as their fellow Republicans battle for the nomination, but the endorsement is likely to be well received among conservatives who comprise a critical voting bloc in Florida. (AP)

Kenya Death Toll Approaches 800

Ethnic violence still flares 1 month after disputed election

NAIVASHA, KENYA | Gangs of youths armed with machetes and clubs fought running battles with police on Sunday and burned tribal rivals alive in their homes in western Kenya, pushing the death toll from a month of escalating ethnic violence to nearly 800.

Sunday marked exactly one month since the Dec. 27 disputed presidential election that sparked the violence that has transformed this once-stable African country, pitting longtime neighbors against each other and turning tourist towns into no-go zones.

It also complicated the task of former U.N. Secretary-General

People carry their belongings as they flee from ethnic clashes in Naivasha, Kenya, on Sunday. At least 22 people were killed in the tourist town over the weekend.

Kofi Annan, the latest international mediator trying to promote talks between President Mwai Kibaki and his chief rival, opposition leader Raila Odinga. The two met Thursday for the first time since the election.

Kibaki's Kikuyu people were the main victims in the initial violence. Now, however, it appears that the Kikuyus are looking for revenge.

"We have moved out to avenge the deaths of our brothers and sisters who have been killed," said Anthony Mwangi, hefting a club in the western town of Naivasha, a previously quiet tourist town.

At least 22 people were killed in Naivasha over the weekend, said district commissioner Katee Mwanza. At least five were burned to death in their homes, said a police official. Others were hacked to death with machetes, a local reporter told The Associated Press.

Odinga met with Annan on Sunday, and opposition spokesman Salim Lone said they were asked to name negotiators for talks, which he said he might start "within a week."

French Bank: Trader Covered Tracks

Lawyer claims bank blamed worker for its own bad investments

PARIS | Societe Generale said Sunday that a trader who evaded its controls to bet $73.5 billion — more than the French bank's market worth — on European markets hacked computers and "combined several fraudulent methods" to cover his tracks, causing billions in losses.

The bank says the trader, Jerome Kerviel, 31, did not appear to have profited personally from the transactions and seemingly worked alone — a version reiterated Sunday by Jean-Pierre Mustier, chief executive of the bank's corporate and investment banking arm.

Kerviel's lawyer said the accusations of wrongdoing against his client were being used to hide bad investments by the bank related to subprime mortgages in the U.S.

"He didn't steal anything, take anything; he didn't take any profit for himself," the lawyer, Christian Charriere-Bournazel, told The Associated Press by telephone. "The suspicion on Kerviel allows the considerable losses that the bank made on subprimes to be hidden."

Officials said Kerviel was cooperating with police, who held him for a second day of questioning Sunday, seeking answers to what, if confirmed, would be the biggest-ever trading fraud by a single person.

"There was a disjoint in the body of fact which the chief executive of Virginia had and the executive branch of the federal government."

Va. Smoking Ban Is Urged

Kaine leads charge against lighting up in restaurants and bars

RICHMOND, VA. | Not too many years ago, it would have been unthinkable just to discuss banning smoking in the bars and restaurants of Virginia, whose earliest economy was based on tobacco.

Anti-smoking groups and health advocates are again pushing for a new law to end smoking in buildings where people eat and drink, but this is the first year they've had a governor leading the charge from the beginning.

Passing the legislation is improbable, considering the broad political support tobacco still retains.

Richmond is, after all, home to Philip Morris' cigarette factory, the world's largest.

Philip Morris opposes the bill, preferring instead that restaurateurs and barkeepers banish smoking as a result of market conditions, not government fiat.

Even supporters of the bill acknowledge that as many as 80 percent of the state's eateries have gone smoke-free to attract a clientele increasingly averse to smoke.

Lincoln's Cottage Unveiled

16th U.S. president's summer house is set to open to the public

WASHINGTON | Until now, a cottage three miles from the White House where Abraham Lincoln paced the floors, contemplating the end of slavery, was largely unknown to the public.

Few locals knew it was still standing on the grounds of the Armed Forces Retirement Home, and tourists searching for Lincoln sites in the nation's capital were far more likely to stop by the Lincoln Memorial or Ford's Theatre, where the 16th president was assassinated.

But in the late 1990s, the house was "rediscovered" by the National Trust for Historic Preservation and, in 2000, declared a national monument by President Clinton.

Now, after a seven-year, $15 million restoration, President Lincoln's Cottage at the Soldiers' Home is set to open to the public for the first time — on Presidents Day, Feb. 18.

"This is one of those places that is kind of hidden in plain sight, and yet it's one of the most significant historic sites," said Richard Moe, president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Lincoln's cottage had been located on a sprawling property landscaped with trees from around the world and surrounded by farms. Historians say the Lincoln family used the summer home for several years of the presidency, including during the Civil War.

The decision to emancipate slaves is the most prominent theme at Lincoln's retreat. Some historians believe Lincoln may have written the Emancipation Proclamation there, though there's still debate. "Our position is that he may well have written it here, but he surely thought it through here," Milligan said. "He paced these floors thinking about the right direction to go." (AP)

Sandy Miller poses with her grandson Scott Seigal, 18. Seigal, a college freshman, says he likes IMing with his grandma because he's "not a huge talker on the phone."

The Great Equalizers

Social networking sites, texting bridge generational gaps

INTERNET | Scott Seigal was awakened one recent early morning by a cellphone text message. It was from his girlfriend's mother.

His friends' parents have posted greetings on his MySpace page for all the world to see. And his 72-year-old grandmother sends him online instant messages every day so they can better stay in touch while he's at college.

"It's nice that adults know SOME things," says Seigal, an 18-year-old freshman at Binghamton University in New York. He especially likes IMing with his grandma because he's "not a huge talker on the phone."

Increasingly, however, he and other young people are feeling uncomfortable about their elders' encroaching on what many young adults and teens consider their technological turf. Nowhere are the technological turf wars more apparent than on social networking sites, such as MySpace and Facebook, which went from being student-oriented to allowing adults outside the college ranks to join.

Gary Rudman, a California-based youth market researcher, has heard the complaints. He regularly interviews young people who think it's "creepy" when an older person — we're talking someone he or she knows — asks to join his or her social network as a "friend." It means, among other things, that they can view each others' profiles and what they and their friends post. "It would be like a 40-year-old attending the prom or a frat party," Rudman says. "It just doesn't work."

Still, in today's world, parents are finding that the urge to stake out technological turf is starting at a very young age.

Jennifer Abelson, a mom in New York, says her 2-year-old daughter asks every day whether she can play on the "puter" on such kid-oriented sites as Noggin.com and Nickjr.com. "She's constantly telling us 'I will do it!' and 'Go away!' if we try to interfere with her 'working,'" Abelson says. "It's pretty amazing to see technology ingrained at such a young age. But I know she's learned so much from being able to use technology on her own."

DALE ROBINETTE

IF SHE CAN'T HAVE HIM ... : Then nobody else can, either. Problem is, Kate (Longoria Parker) is no longer among the living.

Dead Housewife

Eva Longoria Parker cracks the whip from the great beyond

TYPE-A | Eva Longoria Parker emerges from the bedroom of a hotel suite looking glamorous in a bright fuchsia baby-doll dress. Her hair is wavy and beautifully styled. The "Desperate Housewives" star, in a word, looks smashing. But she's feeling under the weather and politely warns that she may lose her voice at any minute.

Longoria Parker, who married San Antonio Spurs point guard Tony Parker last summer and took his name, explains that she also decided to change her name professionally because she is "traditional." She kept her maiden name too because, as the youngest of four girls, she wants to honor her father as well.

Though she's not feeling 100 percent, Longoria Parker dutifully carries on with the business at hand: promoting her new movie, the comedy "Over Her Dead Body." In it she plays a young woman tragically cut down in a bizarre accident on the day of her wedding.

Kate is a type-A control freak who, even in death, tries to take charge of the situation. After anger-ing the angel assigned to help her into the afterlife, Kate is sent back down to Earth for a purpose. The catch is she doesn't know what she has to do.

As an invisible spirit, she clings to Henry, her grieving fiance (played by comedy heartthrob Paul Rudd). After a year or so, Henry agrees to give dating a try, which doesn't sit well with Kate. Henry's would-be girlfriend, Ashley (Lake Bell), turns out to be a medium who somehow manages to conjure up Kate's angry spirit. Initially thrown off by Kate's presence, Ashley decides to fight for her man, ghost or no ghost.

Longoria Parker, 32, says the role was one she couldn't pass up.

"I thought it would be fun to play a ghost," says the brunette beauty. "It was a great cast and we had a lot of fun shooting it."

She says the challenge was to make Kate unique, though she shares some unflattering characteristics with Gabrielle, the character Longoria Parker plays on "Desperate Housewives."

"Gabrielle is very egotistical, conceited and materialistic ... whereas Kate has a really justifiable reason why she's pissed off," observes the actress. "She dies on her wedding day. She's not ready to let go of the man that is the love of her life. She doesn't know how to do that, and she truly believes she's protecting him. She'll do whatever it takes to protect him from this evil person she thinks is no good for him." ANGELA DAWSON

Importance of Being Ernest

The Shackeltons take inspiration and a name from an Irish explorer

POST-PUNK | Mark Redding read a book about early 20th-century Antarctic explorer Ernest Shackleton and was so inspired by the tale, he decided to name his band in tribute to the Irishman whose penchant for overcoming odds knew few bounds.

These days, the story of the Shackeltons is starting to parallel that of the band's namesake — even if Redding accidentally got the spelling of Shackleton's name wrong in his haste to register a Web site name for the band.

To read our conversation with Mark Redding, visit readexpress.com

The non-commercial, post-punk band from small-town Chambersburg, Pa., has a much-buzz-about self-titled CD that hits the streets on Jan. 29.

Stripes, the Pixies and Joy Division. And then there's Redding's possessed singing.

Most people would probably think his distinctive half-spoken style is drawn from typical punk-rock influences like Iggy Pop or Lou Reed. You'd be wrong. Redding cites another Redding — Otis — as inspiration. TONY SCLAFANI

What's in a Name?

The clan of Bush is examined through a Shakespearean lens

KIN | One might read the title of Slate editor Jacob Weisberg's sterling new book, "The Bush Tragedy," and ask, "Does the world need yet another book examining the obvious mistakes of the past eight years?"

Absolutely.

Weisberg's unique angle is in employing the word "tragedy" less in a political sense than in a literary one: He presents a generational drama and finds great success in examining the Bush and Walker families in revealing detail.

Weisberg suggests that a political dynasty that has built a reputation for moderation, realism "and, yes, prudence" has seen its heir eviscerate its good name, and the author connects the dots between George H.W. Bush's string of public breakdowns and his son's repudiation of his family's legacy.

readexpress.com

For more of our conversation with Slate editor Jacob Weisberg, visit readexpress.com/entertainment.php

"I'm trying to conjure a Shakespearean idea, which I talk about in the book," Weisberg said. "There's a family drama which is very sad and involved and involves a lot of different people.

THE AUTHOR SPEAKETH: Weisberg holds court at Politics & Prose on Wednesday.

"The best help I've had in understanding the Bush family comes from Shakespeare," he continued. "I cite 'Henry IV' and 'Henry V,' which chronicle the story of Prince Hal, who, like George W. when he was younger, caused his father lots of headaches.

"They wondered if he was ever going to grow up. Prince Hal surprised everyone and did. He had this big turnaround and gave up his life of carousing and became Henry V and took his country to war. But there's this interesting question at the heart of those plays about how much Prince Hal really does change, whether his character changed. I think those are the same questions we have to ask about President Bush."

Despite the literary references and the reliance on what George H.W. would surely term "psychobabble," Weisberg's amply sourced work also delves in a very serious way into George W.'s policies, relationships with his advisers and beliefs. TIM FOLLOS

Gabriel Byrne has a packed schedule on HBO's 'In Treatment'

BRAIN DOC | One of the many things to celebrate in “In Treatment” (9:30 p.m., HBO), the daring and provocative new cable series, is the return of the powerful half-hour drama. Anyone who has ever spent a New Year’s Day watching a “Twilight Zone” marathon knows how much good acting, dialogue and story can be packed into a mere 30 minutes.

Every night of the week, "Treatment" offers viewers a riveting 30 minutes eavesdropping on a session between Paul (Gabriel Byrne) and one of his patients. He treats a different person each night, with patients returning the same weeknight every week for nine weeks of therapy.

The series kicks off with Laura (Melissa George, "Alias"), a medical professional whose angry and unresolved relationship with her boyfriend has just blown up in her face. After leaving her apartment and engaging in some reckless drunken behavior, she has camped out all night outside Paul's office.

As the session begins, she's a half-frozen, hungover emotional basket case. And as such, she expresses her feelings in fits and starts, punctuated by long stretches of obvious self-deception. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Redskins' Coaching Search on Hold

Coordinator-heavy team will wait until after the Super Bowl

REDSKINS | The Redskins seem to have a whole lot of their coaching staff in place for next season — except for the head coach.

And that head coach won't be Gregg Williams. Or Al Saunders.

As for the rest of the candidates, they'll have to wait until the Super Bowl is done.

Over the weekend, the team fired assistants Williams and Saunders, promoted Greg Blache to lead the team's defense and formally announced the hiring of Jim Zorn to head the offense.

"The process of selecting a new head coach continues, although no hire is planned until after the Super Bowl, so as not to distract from the championship game as well as to keep open all our options," Snyder said in a statement, his first public

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT Dan Snyder and the Redskins were busy this weekend:

→ On Saturday, the team fired Williams and Saunders, promoted defensive line coach Greg Blache to lead the defense and formally announced the hiring of offensive coordinator Jim Zorn.

→ Linebackers coach Kirk Olivadotti agreed to a new contract, a source told the AP.

→ Running backs coach Earnest Byner has been in contract talks with Tampa Bay.

→ The rest of the staff was expected to stay in Washington, but Williams and Saunders are both in high demand, and it is possible some coaches will follow their coordinators.

→ Al Saunders' son, offensive assistant Bob Saunders, will not return, and it is possible Zorn's hiring will leave quarterbacks coach Bill Lazor without a job.

ers and reporters all four years in Washington.

Williams met four times with Snyder to discuss the head coaching job, but it quickly became clear that the owner was more focused on other candidates, including former Giants head coach Jim Fassel, current Giants defensive coordinator Steve Spagnuolo and Patriots offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels.

Snyder lived up to his goal of keeping staff turnover at a reasonable level by promoting Blache, who has coached the defensive line and has held the title of defensive coordinator — in name only, because the job was actually Williams' — since 2004. Blache was previously the defensive coordinator for five seasons for the Chicago Bears.

The moves mean that the new head coach — whoever he is — will find his staff essentially in place when he takes over. In his statement, Snyder expressed confidence in making the moves now because Zorn, Blache and the other Redskins assistants were highly regarded by the candidates he has interviewed.

Bootless Brady Bids New England Farewell

QB addresses fans before Patriots board flight to Super Bowl

SUPER BOWL | Tom Brady returned. His boot didn't.

The Patriots quarterback walked without a limp Sunday as he headed for one of the five buses that would take the team to its flight to Arizona for the Super Bowl a week later.

For the first time since last Sunday, Brady appeared in front of reporters and photographers in Foxborough.

The face of New England's franchise reportedly has a minor high ankle sprain. He wore a protective boot on his right foot last Monday in New York, causing a major stir and concern among Patriots fans hoping the club would beat the New York Giants in the Super Bowl and become the first team in NFL history to finish 19-0.

Patriots quarterback Tom Brady didn't mention his injured foot at the rally.

The NFL MVP made no reference to the boot or the condition of his foot at the rally. Neither did coach Bill Belichick or the other players who addressed the crowd.

Then Brady made some brief remarks.

"We're going down there for one reason," he said. "That's to bring a title back to Foxborough."

From the Bench to the Super Bowl

Once-benched Webster makes big plays to get Giants to the big game

SUPER BOWL | Corey Webster's mother, Lorraine Webster, taught her son about life and the things needed to succeed: discipline, self-motivation and a willingness to persevere.

Those attributes not only helped the third-year cornerback cope after he lost his starting job early in the season, but they are also among the big reasons the New York Giants will be in the Super Bowl next weekend against the New England Patriots.

Don't forget, it was Webster's interception in overtime that led to Lawrence Tynes' winning 47-yard field goal in the NFC championship victory over Green Bay.

"I just stick with it," Webster said of the roller coaster season that saw him start, get demoted, be inactive for two games and eventually return to the starting lineup for the playoffs. "It's just the way I am. My parents put it in me from when I was young. When you come up to obstacles, you keep on going."

He started the first three games this season but lost his job halfway through the third one after giving up a 49-yard pass to Santana Moss that helped Washington to a 17-3 lead.

Late in the season, starter Sam Madison aggravated a pulled stomach muscle in that game and Webster got the starting job for the playoffs.

Webster intercepted Tampa Bay's Jeff Garcia in the end zone, recovered a fumble on a kickoff return in the wild-card win.

Against Dallas, he helped limit a gimpy Terrell Owens to four receptions for 49 yards.

And everyone knows what he did in Green Bay with his interception on the second play in the overtime. It was a doubly sweet redemption for Webster, who earlier had given up a 90-yard scoring pass play to Donald Driver after slipping in coverage. TOM CANAVAN (AP)

Turkoglu's Late 3-Pointer Leads Orlando Past Boston

Hedo Turkoglu nailed an off-balance 3-pointer with time expiring to lift the Orlando Magic to a 96-93 victory over the Kevin Garnett-less Boston Celtics on Sunday. Dwight Howard had 18 points and 16 rebounds for Orlando. The Celtics trailed 75-65 to open the period, then held Orlando scoreless nearly four minutes. Ray Allen tied it for Boston at 93-93 with 14.1 seconds left, and Orlando took its time on the last possession. Turkoglu curled around and pulled up an ugly shot, but it went in for the win. (AP)

Intense 4th Quarter Ends In Victory for Cavs, LeBron

LeBron James and Kobe Bryant went back and forth throughout an intense fourth quarter. James scored 14 of his 41 points for the Cavaliers in the final period, beating the Lakers 98-95 Sunday. Bryant scored nine of his 33 points in the fourth, and also had 12 rebounds and six assists, but it wouldn't be enough to keep the Lakers from losing their third straight. (AP)

Suns Pound Bulls 88-77 Despite Hinrich's 31 Points

Amare Stoudemire scored 24 points and the Phoenix Suns pulled away early in the fourth quarter to beat the Chicago Bulls 88-77 Sunday. Leandro Barbosa scored 13 and started a 12-0 run in the fourth. Kirk Hinrich did all he could to keep the Bulls in the game, finishing with 31 points — the second time in less than a week he scored more than 30. Then Phoenix went on an 8-0 run to grab a 65-59 lead. (AP)

Novak Djokovic falls to the court in celebration after winning a fourth-set tiebreaker.

Djokovic Prevails At Aussie Open

Serbian beats Tsonga in 4 sets, clinching the win in a tiebreaker

TENNIS | Novak Djokovic withstood the expected barrage from upstart Jo-Wilfried Tsonga in the first set, then rallied to win the Australian Open for his first Grand Slam title.

Djokovic fended off the Muhammad Ali lookalike 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 7-6 (2) in the final on Sunday night, ending a sequence of 11 straight majors won by either Roger Federer or Rafael Nadal since Marat Safin's victory in Australia in 2005.

Djokovic had not lost a set in six matches leading into the final, including his semifinal win over two-time defending champion Federer.

But with unseeded Tsonga coming out swinging like he did in his upset over No. 2 Nadal in the semifinals and three other top 14 players, that streak came to a sudden end.

The third-ranked Djokovic rebounded in the second and third sets, and after saving a crucial breakpoint in the fourth, dominated the tiebreaker to clinch his first major.

The 20-year-old Djokovic was the youngest player since Stefan Edberg defeated Mats Wilander in 1985 to win the Australian title and the first man from Serbia to win a major.

Tsonga, ranked 38th coming into his fifth major, will move up to No. 18 after advancing past the fourth round for the first time. Tsonga believes he has the game to break into the top 10.

"Not everybody can beat players who I beat," he said. "It's very difficult, and I did it. So, of course, I'm confident now."

Djokovic said he planned to take a couple weeks off to enjoy the celebrations.

"It's my first major, but it's just the start of a long season," he said.

Tiger Dominates the Buick

With an 8-stroke win, Woods ties Palmer's 62 career victories

GOLF | Tiger Woods joined the King and left everyone else at the Buick Invitational feeling like paupers.

In his most dominant start to a season, Woods built an 11-shot lead Sunday until his game and the fickle weather turned cold on the back nine. A birdie on the last hole gave him a 1-under 71 and an eight-shot victory, giving him 62 for his career to tie Arnold Palmer on the PGA Tour list.

"I'm sure that there are many, many more coming in the future," Palmer said. "There isn't any question about that."

Woods opened with a 40-foot birdie putt, threw in a 60-foot birdie just to keep the gallery from falling asleep, and looked mortal only when he made three straight bogeys toward the end of his round.

Woods finished at 18-under 270 to win the Buick Invitational for the fourth consecutive year, tying a PGA Tour record for consecutive wins in a single tournament. Woods is the only player to own such a streak at two events, having also won four in a row at Bay Hill.

Woods returns to Torrey Pines for the U.S. Open, and if this week was any indication, it could be another long week for his peers.

The world's No. 1 player now has won six times as a pro at Torrey Pines, and his comment that the Grand Slam is "easily within reason" looked every bit of that.

The Explorers Club has a long history of pushing boundaries

The Explorers Club was going to extremes long before the concept was in vogue.

The club has remained vibrant for more than a century by quenching a thirst to visit the world's uncharted regions and bring back knowledge about the people, plants and animals found there.

Reaching the Earth's poles, its highest summit, the deepest part of its oceans or the surface of the moon were all important firsts recorded by Explorers Club members, but those journeys were also valued for the new perspectives the adventurers gained along the way.

"At its core, the club is about humanism," said archaeologist Joan Breton Connelly, a professor at New York University and a club member since 1990.

The club's belief in the importance of exploration and how it can benefit humankind was perhaps best exemplified by its honorary chair, Sir Edmund Hillary, who died earlier this month. With Sherpa Tenzing Norgay, he was first to the top of Mount Everest.

The Explorers Club was formed in 1905 in New York City by veterans of Arctic exploration. The race to get to the poles was at a fever pitch, and its early years were dominated by expeditions to the top and bottom of Earth.

Frederick A. Cook and Robert E. Peary were among the club's first presidents. Though Cook claimed to have reached the North Pole in 1908, Peary is generally given credit for accomplishing the feat a year later.

The club also lays claim to the record for the deepest ocean dive, by U.S. Navy Lt. Don Walsh and Swiss engineer Jacques Piccard in January 1960. Sealed inside the 150-ton bathyscaph Trieste, the pair descended to 35,800 feet in the Marianas Trench off Guam in the Pacific Ocean.

The club's headquarters contains a treasure trove of exploration artifacts and memorabilia in its high-ceilinged, oak-paneled rooms.

Elephant tusks frame the fireplace in the members' lounge. The foyer has an ice ax sculpture signed by Hillary. Artwork done by members dots the walls, depicting vistas they encountered on their trips.

The club has about 3,000 members in 32 chapters around the globe. Membership is by application, with experience in scientific exploration and a belief in the importance of promoting exploration being criteria for admission.

Dr. Ken Kamler, a microsurgeon by trade and an expedition doctor by experience, is on the Explorers Club board. He had another gauge for applicants.

"Does the person have an interesting story to tell? If the answer is no, they probably don't belong in the club," Kamler said. "Everyone has at least one good story." PATRICK HORNE (AP)

Schools fit in arts instruction despite budgetary restraints

Sixth-grader Camarry Hall adjusted her sheet music, waited for her teacher to give the go-ahead and then started belting out notes on a bass clarinet nearly as big as she is.

Camarry is one of about a dozen students in an after-school music program at Indianapolis Public School 70, an arts magnet school that has partnered with Butler University to provide more arts instruction to youngsters in one of Indiana's poorest districts.

"We have a lot of fun playing notes and different songs," Camarry said before the group broke into small ensembles with Butler students to rehearse for an upcoming concert.

Arts have long been a part of education, but advocates say such classes are often first on the chopping block as schools face tight budgets and increasing pressure to perform well on high-stakes academic tests. A Center on Education Policy survey released this year showed that more than 40 percent of the districts surveyed have cut time in elementary schools for non-tested subjects, including art and music.

Such moves have forced schools in cities such as Indianapolis, Los Angeles and Dallas to find creative ways to squeeze arts into the day —

“When students see the arts as part of their daytime learning, they see it as equally important as math and reading.”

RICHARD BURROWS, ARTS EDUCATOR

such as partnering with arts groups to bring more cultural experiences to students.

"I think we're seeing a resurgence of the arts," said Mary Fulton, a policy analyst with the Education Commission of the States. "There's been a push back by parents and others who want to keep the arts in schools and want their children to have a well-rounded education."

The National Association for Music Education says that skills learned through the discipline of music transfer well into study skills, cognitive abilities and improved communication that are useful in other subjects.

Studies have shown that students in high-quality music programs score higher than students in schools with deficient music programs on standardized tests, regardless of the school's socio-economic factors.

Yet the No Child Left Behind education reform act, which requires schools to meet annual progress goals or face sanctions including reorganization, has, in many cases, shifted the focus to test scores instead of musical scores.

By partnering with community groups, however, some school districts counter the loss of arts opportunities by providing new programs outside the school day, such as field trips to museums.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, for example, uses community arts groups to work with teachers on professional development. The district is also working to put at least four arts teachers — in dance, music, visual arts and theater — in every elementary school.

So far, 340 out of 500 schools have teachers in all those subjects, said Richard Burrows, the director of arts education for the district.

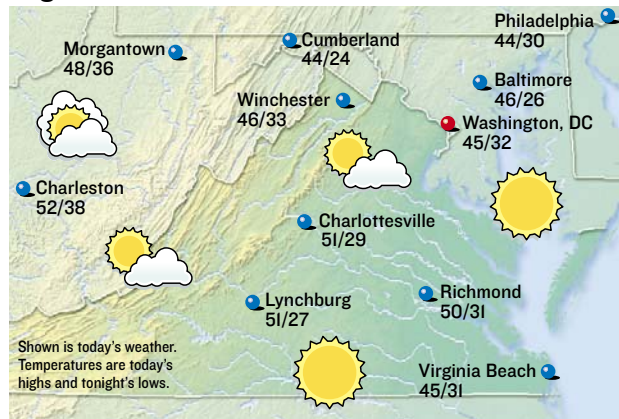

"It's the right thing to do," Burrows said. "When students see the arts as part of their daytime learning, they see it as equally important as math and reading."

"If you have a lazy eye or weird cowlick, you can cover it. It's a great cosmetic."

"If you have a round face, you can lose five pounds by wearing one," Kim says. "A chunky beret makes the face look slimmer." A plush popcorn knitted style adds bulk to the top of the head and diverts eyes away from the face.

Long before becoming a fashion ornament, the beret was conscripted by armed forces where its tilt was determined by policy. Chic civilians need not worry about proper inclination, however; their focus should be on what looks good in the mirror. "Tilt it to the side you want to cover your less-good side," Kim says. "If you have a lazy eye or weird cowlick, you can cover it. It's a great cosmetic." It's even possible to wear the beret straight on the head, instead of at an angle. This look requires old-fashioned experimentation to find out what works best with your features.

Black seems to be the standard beret hue, but colors and textures act as a catalyst in creating the stuff memorable outfits are made of. "Eggplant is a good color because it looks good against most skin tones," Kim says. "More adventurous girls can do something like bright purple. If you wear a purple hat with all black or all gray, it really punches up the outfit."

The urban uniform of jeans and a T-shirt is dramatically brightened when spruced up with a chunky wool beret — in any color. A sleeker style in cashmere adds a seductive edge to simple party wear and dramatic red lips. Plain styles work best with busier outfits and vice versa, so plan accordingly to avoid a fashion disaster.

Despite what the label might say, one size does not fit all, but because many styles stretch and change shape, hope is not lost for those who have trouble finding the right fit. Berets come in a variety of sizes, so spend time adjusting your hat for your ideal look. If a certain size doesn't seem to be working, move on.

"If you have a small face, push it back," Kim advises, adding that petite facial features are prone to being overpowered when the hat isn't resting far enough back on the head. When deciding which beret to wear in her own daily pursuits, she likes to use size as a theme. "A cute little beret can be worn with a short dress, and a big huge one is cute with wide-leg pants. A black sequined one with black skinny jeans is cool, too." ERIN WEINGER (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Beauty

Skin Sins, Undid

Jogging in the cold, sans scarf. Quaffing more Spanish wine than was prudent. Snarfing fried food. We had been cruel to our skin. Then we tried Darphin's new FIBROGENE line of face serum, balm and nourishing cream ($150-165, Darphin.com). What's a fibrogene? Who knows? But ingredients like shea butter and coriander oil made our mug look less like the one in Dorian Gray's portrait, and the serum smelled like a posh French hotel. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

Fashion

Bigfoot Finally Found

If only her acting talent was as big as her shoe size (that would be 11). Nevertheless, the heiress will launch the PARIS HILTON FOOTWEAR COLLECTION at a Costa Mesa, Calif., Macy's on Feb. 8. Styles range from stilettos to boots and will cost $59 to $195. Each will capture the essence of Hilton's deep, uh, soul with pink soles that come outfitted with heart-shaped comfort pads. Look for 'em at Macy's, Zappos.com and Lord & Taylor. "I have always loved shoes, and after working on my recently launched sportswear and fragrance lines, this seemed like a natural next step," says Hilton. Next step? Really? Wow. KRIS CORONADO (EXPRESS)

Bonjour, Beret

Even before Phillip Lim sent model Irina Lazareanu down his spring runway in a tilted sequin topper in September, the beret had emerged as this year's elegant revival.

Back in a way not seen since Faye Dunaway pulled one on in "Bonnie and Clyde," the beret had been popping up on trendy starlets everywhere. Rihanna mixed a gray casual knit style with jeans and a daring bustier during an MTV appearance, and during a Teen Vogue fashion show, Hilary Duff wore a black number tilted to the left with a wisp of bangs peeking through. For a Chanel fete, she teamed it with leggings.

The beret can change the look of an outfit and add personality to lackluster ensembles in an instant, but don't be deceived: Simple in design, berets are tricky to get right.

Hat and accessory designer Eugenia Kim, whose funky styles are a favorite with Alicia Keys and Madonna, offers advice to ensure that the topper remains sophisticated, instead of becoming merely ordinary.

The TV Report

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to break down the latest writers' strike developments, offer her take on the new Fox reality show "Moment of Truth" and comment about "The Wire."

I'm alarmed by the precipitous drop-off in viewership for my new favorite show, "The Sarah Connor Chronicles." What threshold would it have to maintain for Fox to renew it for another season?

It needs to cling to every single viewer it has now. It's lost about 10 million viewers off its premiere. I'm guessing we may see a couple episodes air after "American Idol" at some point.

Simply reading your column about "Moment of Truth" makes me want to take a shower. But thanks to your headline writers, I at least have "All the Young Dudes" stuck in my head now.

I, on the other hand, had the urge to wash my eyes out with lye after watching the first episode. I still can't figure why someone would go on this show when the top prize is a lousy half a million bucks. Surely, Personal Trainer Guy thinks his possible loss of wife, definite loss of friends and possible loss of career is worth at least a million dollars.

What's your gut feeling: Will they reach an agreement before the Academy Awards?

I think that's what everyone's hoping. Which means it's in the WGA's best interest to drag the talks out. The Oscars are the guild's trump card — a scrubbed Academy Awards broadcast would hurt all studios with nominations. Doesn't the guild have a stronger position at the bargaining table the closer it gets to Academy Awards night?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may feel it's time to hit the highway, but there are one or two loose ends to tie up before you are on your way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may have to balk at a friend's special request in the interest of safety. Errors are likely to prove more hazardous than usual.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're in no mood to be the life of the party, but by day's end you'll be able to enjoy yourself more than you had expected.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Environmental influences are not to be discounted. Concentrate on overcoming any setback that is man-made. You can't overcome the stars.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may be difficult to get the information you need out of a Libra native who proves more stubborn than expected. Be creative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Look for love to develop in an unusual fashion toward day's end — but take care that you don't jump into something you can't get out of quickly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You think you know a great deal, and what you do know is valuable — but be sure to listen to those who have been in your shoes previously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your drive and ambition will be on the rise. You'll have what it takes to overcome an obstacle that stands between you and a goal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A dream is likely to be dangled before you by someone who has something to ask of you. With work, you can make the whole thing pay off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) It is essential that you are sincere all day long. The moment something sounds false, you're likely to lose much of the support you've earned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Many things will combine to provide greater opportunity than you had expected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Useless comparisons can prove only hazardous to you; focus on those things that are of tangible value. Steer clear of the unexpected.

Fenty Shows Leadership

IN RESPONSE TO Friday's letter ("D.C. Government Woes Mount") regarding the cynicism toward the D.C. government's competency, the recent scandals have become public because of May-
